The words uttered by Fidel Castro in his latest outburst against the United States frighten us.

Our concern, it should be clear, does not come from the fact that Castro called the United States "the enemy of humanity." All the testimony of years and the evidence of our international relations refuted this absurdity.

What saddens us is that Castro, after surveying today's world, can choose destruction for his country.

When he says, as he did in Havana, that "We (Cuba) will be friends of the Soviets and the People's Republic of (Red) China," he closed his eyes to the unhappy areas of the globe.

He pays no heed to serfdom behind the Iron Curtain, and shows no regard for human rights.

Pity the people of Cuba whom Castro is fitting with totalitarian straitjackets even while they shout his praise! They'll reap little benefit from the Reds whom he calls "friends."

Still Seek Security

Rewarding the faithful in politics with a job for their work in the campaigns once again comes up for discussion and while those in office would like to offer security to those working for the state they are at a loss as to the proper procedure.

Of course, having all workers on civil service would perform the miracle of security, but the politicians certainly won't ever release, or remove, from the records, the thing called patronage.

The office holders want to retain forever the right to make appointments, mostly of individuals who have very little ability but who are handed a job just because of friendship.

Highways Secretary Park H. Martin, a most efficient cabinet member, recently told a legislative committee that his department won't ever be completely efficient "until the legislature institutes a more permanent type of civil service for professional and technical personnel."

The party in power in government always favors more civil service workers. That's natural. The appointments represent the party in power and since parties change in government they want those in positions to retain them. The party not in power fights for patronage, the appointive power to get their "friends" on jobs.

It is argued that "to prevent ossifying of government" a great many jobs should remain on a patronage basis. And this is logical but hardly applicable to skilled and well trained

Good workers are hard to come by for they are in demand in all businesses which seek people with skills and professions. And in private business there is more stability than in govern-

In politics the job axe hangs by a thread which trembles every four years and the desk chair jobs aren't the most comfortable in government anywhere. Once the state learns to protect its good workers, good reliable and competent individuals can be secured.

The new population consists mainly of young families with small children. The increase in the number of children and the general increase in population makes the need for public land of primary importance. We all realize that children need playgrounds and a supervised recreational program.

But what about the rest of our citizens—those other than the school age group? With shorter working hours and more leisure, recreation has become important to the entire family. An outdoor barbeque in the backvard is fine relaxation, but it's nice, too, to get away from home and look at different scenery once in a while.

Public parks in Stroud Township would give the families an apportunity to enjoy this change in scenery and still be just a short drive from home. Active and passive recreation

Grandson Of E.S. Woman Marries

The grandson of Mrs. Charles Wiley, of East Stroudsburg was married recently in Columbus,

The wedding took place in First Presbyterian Church between Miss Mary Jo Snable, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. ion St., Columbus, and Norman H. Wiley, Jr., son of Mrs. N. H. Wiley, Sr., and the late Col. Wiley, of Columbus.

The bride wore a full length silk gown made with appliques on the bodice and skirt. Her veil was fastened to a small crown and she carried orchids and lillies

There were other mats on the same table. Some were from Scandinavia, and were of the finest linen printed in typical Swedish and Danish designs. One set that caught my eye was in natural tan with a border or deep tan. These were only 1.00 apiece, and gave the print of either rose-coral, powder blue, gold, light olive, apearance of being worth much more. A rather similar place mat with all-over print is available in an eight piece set-four mats, four napkins, prettily boxed for only 4.98. The colors are deep yellow, almost gold, and dull blue. A very lovely wedding or shower gift, I think.

From Italy there is a more elaborate and costly set of Bisso linen. I'm not sure what Bisso means, but these mats and napkins are edged in a rather lacy drawn design. The price is 15.00. Far too lovely, I think, for a dinner of spaghetti . . . but wonderful for a table where something is to be served that's not quite so "splashably tomatoey,"

There were other place mats too. One of linen has a prim rose design in either blue or pink. Another is of white terry with a gay and giddy rooster in full color. The former are 1.00 each; the latter, 98c each. Both have backing of foam rubber and are machine washable, color fast, and skidproof.

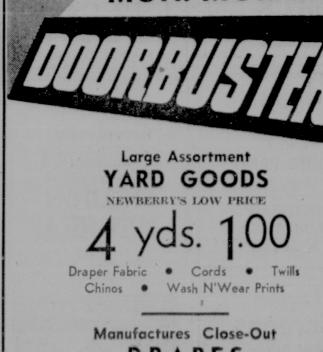

After all this, I decided to return to the reality of Stroudsburg, Pa., and, even more immediately, the Remington waiting on my mahogany desk. I realize that I didn't REALLY cover the world . . . but tomorrow's another day. O day in which to explore Peru and Bolivia through the woolen skirts, fur shoes, shawls and scarfs in our accessories and shoe departments. A day to dream of windmills and canals, tulips and wooden shoes, as our table filled with Delft transports me to Holland. A day to prowl through castles along the Rhine, as I admire the German silver gleaming in our gift department, or go back to an entirely different world of 60,000,000 years ago as I study the glorious polished and unpolished amber which is actually the hardened sap of mammoth trees that were snapped off and crushed by the onslaught of the ice age.

The wonderful thing about all this is that my trip around and out of this world didn't cost me a cent. It COULDN'T. Not as long as I kept a firm grip on my determination, and my purse in my desk drawer.
